FOR POLITICAL EFFECT

Newspaper reports continue to be sent out from Washington, New York and other commercial and business centers that money matters are growing tighter and predicting general business depression. These stories come in the fact of the best crop conditions known in several years.

Stress is laid to the reports of unprecedented imports and the sending away of gold to other countries, when as a fact, the bulk of American money that has been sent away has been loaned.

Furthermore there is a demand for labor at home. Every grain growing state has been calling for hands and industrial agencies report business as growing better.

The stringency cry is for political effect. Congress is now working on the anti trust bill and beneficiaries of trusts do not want it. The same activities were noticed when the currency bill and the tariff bill were before Congress. Those bills were passed and business was not disturbed. President Wilson says the scare about further legislation along these lines is psychological. He says he knows what he is doing. He will press the anti-trust legislation and business will not be hurt.

The opposition has it in mind to discredit the Democratic administration and if possible, to bring on a period of financial and business stringency and charge it up to the Democratic party. It is an effort to restore the country to Republican rule in 1916 and to cut what figure it may in the congressional elections next fall.

It is a shaking up of the interests so long protected and they are determined to create as much feeling as possible against the Democratic administration.

Judge Smith spoke at Snyder on the 13th inst. and while the signal did him justice to say he was listened to by a good crowd of about two hundred people who received his speech with good attention and applause, yet there is a subtle undertone of "faint praise" in the notice. Surely Brothers Hardy and Pickle, there is no fly in the ointment of your loyalty to the best and most useful member of congress (his section in West Texas ever had—Colorado Record.

What's the matter with you? Aren't you satisfied with truthful statements? A star witness once secured the acquittal of a guilty friend by swearing vehemently against him. The signal has great respect for Judge Smith, but extravagant praise is not necessary.

R. M. JOHNSTON SOUNDS WARNING.

Col. R. M. Johnston of the Houston Post knows the game of politics as well as any man in Texas. He is a patriot and a Democrat. He is a straight-out anti-prohibitionist, but his love for Texas and his desire for a safe, sound, business administration leads him to support Tom Hall, a prohibitionist for governor. He has been in every political contest in Texas for a long time. He says the Ferguson people are playing a bold hand and warns the friends of Col. Hall to go to the State convention. The committee selected El Paso for the convention because it would put it out of range of easy access and he predicts an effort to stock it with anti-Hall delegates. He expects Hall to get the nomination and looks for the convention to do everything possible to handicap him.

It is probable that an effort will be made to commit the party against the Wilson administration and to try to adopt a "heart of oak" plank against supporters of Col. Hall and prohibition.

Col. Johnston urges the Hall people to go to the convention at any cost and be ready to preserve the dignity and honor and secure the perpetuity of Texas democracy.

Ablene Reporter's Big Special The Ablene Reporter, last Sunday issued a 32 page Anniversary edition. The splendid array of editorial and descriptive matter would do credit to metropolitan journal and the advertising patronage, which made the big edition possible reflects the business enterprise of the town.

No newspaper can show up the progressive advantages of its town where the patronage is doled out to it grudgingly. Ablene business men are wide awake, they appreciate the efforts of their representative newspaper, and they know that money spent for advertising is judiciously invested. The business men of Ablene are making a city.

A Fort Worth autoist bragged about the bond of friendship among auto drivers. He said he had trouble with his car and inside of 30 minutes a half dozen autos stopped to find if any assistance could be rendered. Just then, a farmer stepped into way that as he was coming to town in automobile, carrying two men and two women, rushed past him and tripped his wheels sending them to run away. The speeder looked back and laughed and sped on.
